

Naturales Quaestiones: Bks.I-III v. 1

Lucius Annaeus Seneca, T.H. Corcoran

Seneca (c. 4-65 CE) devotes most of Naturales Quaestiones to celestial phenomena. In Book 1 he discusses fires in the atmosphere in 2, lightning and thunder in 3, bodies of water. Seneca's method is to survey the theories of major authorities on the subject at hand, so his work is a guide to Greek and Roman thinking about the heavens.
