

The National Monthly of Canada, Vol. 5 : July, 1904 (Classic Reprint)

Unknown Author

Excerpt from The National Monthly of Canada, Vol. 5: July, 1904 At this juncture it happened casually, one fine, mild afternoon, that two neighbors of Joshua met. They were both somewhat interested in the progress of school matters, and one of them was an ardent backer of Mr. Harbottle, but purely, upon economical grounds. Taxes were always a sad worry to Hiram Bleecker. The conversation, purely conventional at first, rapidly veered to the topic of the day. At last, Abishai Larkins spoke his mind, to wit.
