

The Natural World as a Philosophical Problem

Jan Patočka, Edited by Ivan Chvatik, Edited by Lubica Ucnik, Erika Abrams, Foreword by Ludwig Landgrebe

The first text to critically discuss Edmund Husserl's concept of the life-world, The Natural World as a Philosophical Problem reflects Jan Patočka's youthful conversations with the founder of phenomenology and two of his closest disciples, Eugen Fink and Ludwig Landgrebe. Now available in English for the first time, this translation includes an introduction by Landgrebe and two self-critical afterwords added by Patočka in the 1970s. Unique in its extremely broad range of references, the work addresses the views of Russell, Wittgenstein, and Carnap alongside Husserl and Heidegger, in a spirit that considerably broadens the understanding of phenomenology in relation to other twentieth-century trends in philosophy. Even eighty years after first appearing, it is of great value as a general introduction to philosophy, and it is essential reading for students of the history of phenomenology as well as for those desiring a full understanding of Patočka's contribution to contemporary thought.
